

a 2007 0111

The invention relates to electrochemistry and can be used as electric power storage.

Summary of the invention consists in that the device includes two electrodes of different metals, present in electrolytes, containing solutions of salts of the same acid and two reserves of metal salts of which electrodes are made. The electrodes are connected through an external circuit.

Claims: 1