

96-0231

The invention relates to the construction industry, namely, to the structural thermoplastic systems and components therefor.

The structural components are obtained by means of thermoplastic material extrusion, the compound of which contains reinforcing constituents.

The articles components contain elements for interconnection for the structures mounting.

Claims: 19

Fig.: 22