

97-0249

The invention relates to the medicine technic, namely, to the gas therapy apparatus and may be used for prophylaxis and treatment of the nervous and breathing systems functional disturbances.

The summary of the invention consists in the fact that normopressure gas therapy installation contains the gas source with the pipe, gas feeding device, gas analyser, patient support, manufactured in form of a chair and personal box which is connected to the gas feeding device and gas analyser by means of the calibrating opening, and the patient support is placed into the personal box. The installation may contain two or more personal boxes. The boxes are made unhermetic and transparent.

The technical result consists in the uniform and controlled distribution of the gas mixture.

Claims: 3

Fig.: 1