

98-0149

The invention relates to medicine, particularly, to the stomatology and may be used for treatment of the different paradontium diseases.

The method consists in introducing of the medications by means of the injection administration into the muco-gingival fold damaged region, by that as a medication there is used mononuclear cells culture suspension, prepared of the recipient's blood.

The technical result consists in inhibition of the paradontium tissue inflammation and decreasing of the bone tissue resorption.

Claims: 1