

The invention refers to medicine, in particular to cardiology.

Summary of the invention consists in that for decreasing the vascular contraction induced by natural vasoconstrictor agents, it is daily administered spirulina extract in microdoses of 10...12 mg, per os, or 41...49 $\mu\text{g}/\text{kg}$ intravenous, thus attaining the effective concentration in the blood stream of 55...65 $\mu\text{g} \%$.