

The invention refers to the electrical engineering, namely to rectifiers and it is meant for power plant supply.

The rectifier includes a transformer, into the circuit of the secondary winding of which it is connected in series the rectifier diode unit and parallel to a smoothing element and the load. In the capacity of smoothing element it is connected a direct current machine, onto the shaft of which it is mounted a fan.