

The invention refers to the alcoholic beverage industry, namely to a balsam composition.

The balsam composition contains hydroalcoholic macerate from the vegetal raw material: sweet flag calamus rhizomes, aerial part of common marjoram, aerial part of St. John's wort, liquorice, rhizomes and roots of leuzea carthamoides, wild rose fruits, corn stigmata, as well as the ingredients: alcoholized grape juice, caramel, citric acid, sugar and hydroalcoholic solution; the vegetal raw material and the ingredients being taken in the following ratio kg to 1000 L of finished product:

sweet flag calamus rhizomes	0,05...0,075
aerial part of common marjoram	0,25...0,35
aerial part of St. John's wort	0,55...0,77
liquorice	0,85...1,15
rhizomes and roots of leuzea carthamoides	0,51...0,71
wild rose fruits	0,55...0,74
corn stigmata	0,04...0,06
alcoholized grape juice	221...299
caramel	8,5...11,5
citric acid	0,07...0,11
sugar	68,3...89,8
hydroalcoholic solution, L	the rest, up to the strength of 48% vol.

The result of the invention consists in enlarging the balsam assortment.

Claims: 1