

a 2005 0048

The invention refers to medicine, namely to a process for obtaining anatomic corrosion preparations.

The process, according to the invention, includes filling of the organ or vessel with an alkali-resistant mass, corrosion of the organ tissues or vessel walls with 10% solution of sodium hydroxide at 65...70°C during 5...7 hours and washing of the obtained plaster cast with water.

Claims: 1