

a 2007 0006

The invention relates to the material resources identification field and can be used for conductive part marking, for example, in motor-car construction, aircraft construction, defense industry, etc.

The method consists in that the irreproducible image of the identification mark is created by electric discharge between the part and the composite electrode, made of nanocomposites of superdispersed metal powders.

Claims: 4

Fig.: 1