

a 2009 0084

The invention relates to the information technologies, namely to a method for the protection of documents and confirmation of their authenticity.

The method, according to the invention, includes application on the document, in the process for manufacture thereof, of a set of security features, including an optical protection system, at the same time on its photosensitive and/or reliefographic layer, on the designated part of predetermined dimensions, is recorded the holographic image of the protected document with all individual characteristics thereof, and the recognition of the authenticity of the documents is carried out directly by comparing the image of the document with its holographic image.

Claims: 1

Fig.: 2