

a 2010 0055

The present invention relates to the marking of products, namely to a method for obtaining an object identification tag.

The method, according to the invention, provides for the application on the object of an identification number, an information grid and an individual matrix, the individual matrix being preliminarily formed separately from the object on a nanofilm by stochastic pointwise evaporation of some of its sectors upon electric discharge.

Claims: 1

Fig.: 4